School fighting court ruling

Judge says girl who sued Clark-Pleasant in 2003 has right to trial

A decision that would let a jury decide if a former student should receive money for derogatory comments published in a student newspaper has been appealed by Clark-Pleasant Community School Corp.

The student sued the school in 2003 for defamation, negligence, invasion of privacy and causing emotional distress.

Johnson County Superior Court Judge Kevin Barton decided the student may have the right to a trial for some of the issues.

The school district wants the Indiana Court of Appeals to review that decision.

If the court accepts the appeal, the judges can choose to uphold or reverse Barton's decision. Or they can clarify points of law that may have been unclear and send the case back to Barton for another ruling, Barton said.

If the appeals court doesn't accept the case, it could go to trial in Johnson County, he said.

The civil lawsuit alleges defamation, negligent infliction of emotional distress, intentional infliction of emotional distress and two counts of invasion of privacy.

The student sued the school corporation, the high school, the principal, a vice principal and the journalism adviser.

School district attorney Rosemary Borek filed a motion of summary judgment, which asks the court to rule in favor of the defendants without a trial.

In a summary judgment motion, the judge's decision is based on law because there is no genuine disagreement over the facts of the case.

Barton dismissed a vice principal and the school superintendent from being held liable in the suit, according to a court opinion.

He decided that the student could not hold the principal, vice principal or journalism adviser responsible in their individual job capacities. Barton also ruled that the student couldn't sue for public disclosure of a private fact, according to the court opinion.

Barton ruled the student may have the right to go to trial on the following grounds: defamation, negligent infliction of emotional distress and intentional infliction of emotional distress, the opinion said.

A 2002 senior edition of Whiteland high school's monthly student newspaper, Smoke Signals, prompted the lawsuit.

The publication gave the student, who reported she had been raped, a "worst reputation" label, printed that her favorite song was "Underneath Your Clothes" and made a reference about the student, rape, a monkey and being fired from a future job.

School officials said the newspaper adviser saw the entries and deleted them from the edition, but the newspaper's student editor put them back in before sending the paper to be printed.

Council closer to approving bonds for county wish list

By ANNIE GOELLER

One vote stands between county offices getting more than $4 million to spend on cars, computers and software.

County officials approved two preliminary requests to borrow money for the equipment.

In total, the county would borrow about $4.3 million in two separate bonds.

Property tax money would pay back about $3.5 million. Money the state collects and gives the county from taxes and fees, such as fuel taxes and vehicle registration fees, would pay back the other $800,000.

Both bonds are working their way through a process of hearings and votes. The county council passed a first reading of the requests and is expected to take a final vote next month.

If the proposal passes, county offices could start spending the money in the summer.

County officials broke the money into two requests because equipment for the highway department that was originally included could not be paid for with general, taxpayer dollars.

Money from motor vehicle, highway, and local road and street funds, which are collected by the state from fuel taxes, driver's license fees, odometer fees, vehicle registration fees and money collected for defensive driving courses, will be used to pay for the equipment.

Council members are considering some changes before the final vote, such as reducing the $3.5 million and changing the time allowed to pay back the money, which ranges from three to seven years.

The council passed the first reading of the $3.5 million bond 6-1. Paul Reed voted against the issue because, he said, paying back the borrowed money would burden taxpayers.

The council passed the first vote on the $800,000 highway department bond 7-0.

Republican files to fill Yount's seat

By PAUL MINNIS
THE REPUBLIC (COLUMBUS)

Milo Smith thinks he has the key to making Indiana property tax assessments fair to every Hoosier.

He wants a chance to prove it works by running for elected office.

The 55-year-old Columbus resident filed Monday for the District 59 state representative seat occupied by David Yount, who has declared he will not run again.

Like Yount, Smith is a Republican, and he thinks he is uniquely qualified because of his 16-year job as president of Tax Consultants Inc. of Columbus.

Commercial entities hire his company to correct assessment problems. They pay only if he lowers assessments to their advantage.

"I think I'll be able to push for changes that will make assessments fair for everyone and easier to understand," he said. "I consider this my civic responsibility. I want to make a difference."

He said he decided to run Friday morning, just an hour after reading that Yount would not run for a sixth term.

He filed for office Monday in Indianapolis and filed a "courtesy" candidacy Tuesday at Bartholomew County Courthouse.

No other Republican had filed for the seat as of Tuesday. Gary Bell filed on the Democratic side.

"I get along with people, and I'm very honest," said Smith, an elder and trustee at First Christian Church in Columbus. "I treat people how they want to be treated."

He is an advisory counsel member for Home School Partners and Council for Youth Development. He has served as a small business delegate to the White House under two presidents.

Smith and his wife, Diane, have two daughters, Lauren and Abby, who attend Columbus East High School. He also has a son, Chris, 34, of Los Angeles, and a daughter, Melissa, 28, of St. Columbia, Mo.

Police: Man sold pot to undercover officers

Daily Journal staff report

Police said they found more than two pounds of marijuana in a Greenwood man's house after he sold nearly two ounces to undercover officers.

Aaron A. Miller, 376 Savannah Drive, was arrested Tuesday night on charges of dealing marijuana/hashish, possession of marijuana/hashish and possession of a controlled substance.

After receiving a tip last week, the Greenwood Police Department contacted Miller and recorded two telephone conversations where he agreed to sell marijuana, a police report said.

The agreement was for Miller to get $480 for two ounces of marijuana, the report said.

Police went to his home, where Miller accepted the money and gave the officers the 1.8 ounces that were in his vehicle, the report said.

Detectives later obtained a search warrant and went to the home of Miller's parents, where he lives. They found more than two pounds of marijuana inside, the report said.

Miller, 22, was released from Johnson County jail after posting $9,000 bond.
