

It's a good day for 'Monkey' business

Go ahead: Indulge your inner child. Spend your President's Day watching cartoons. A true fish-out-of-water tale, the new cartoon "My Gym Partner's a Monkey" (6:30 p.m., Cartoon Network) follows the misadventures of a human boy assigned to a junior high school filled with zoo creatures.

Kevin McDonough

When a typographical error confuses Adam Lyon with an actual lion, he has to share his home-room, locker and gym class at the Charles Darwin Middle School with chimps, elephants, giraffes and goldfish. Sometimes Adam's human attributes are a plus, but most of the time he has trouble adjusting to life in a zoo.

Several familiar voices can be heard on "Monkey," including Tom Kenny ("SpongeBob SquarePants") as a Jake Spidermonkey, Brian Doyle Murray ("Groundhog Day") provides the voice of Coach Gills, the football coach who happens to be a goldfish.

"SpongeBob SquarePants" (8 p.m., Nickelodeon) offers a time-travel episode. SpongeBob and his pal Patrick are as excited as they can be to visit a tacky medieval theme restaurant, but after a jousting mishap, they find themselves transported to the real Middle Ages. Or a slapstick version of the Middle Ages populated by creatures very similar to their old Bikini Bottom crowd.

Don't look for a history lesson. At one point, the hapless duo find themselves on the wrong end of a guillotine, a device that wasn't used regularly for executions until centuries after the Middle Ages. But I'm not one to read too much into a "SpongeBob" cartoon. I'll leave that to the televangelists.

With so many recent news stories about watching television on your computer or iPod, it's easy to overlook how much Internet-generated material is ending up on television. "Outrageous & Contagious: Viral Videos" (10 p.m., Bravo) offers an "America's Funniest Home Video" take on the silly clips and jpegs circulating around the Web. Not to be confused with the VH1 show "Web Junk 20" that airs on Friday nights.

Frankly, I'm surprised there aren't more shows like this. Or that there isn't more Web content integrated into scripted comedies and drama. The Internet has been in fairly wide usage for 10 years now.

'Godfather' actor killed by bus in Manhattan

Richard Bright, a character actor who appeared in all three "Godfather" movies and more recently on "The Sopranos," was struck and killed by a bus, police said.

Bright, 68, was hit by a private Academy Bus as he crossed the street at about 6:30 p.m. Saturday in his Manhattan neighborhood, police Detective Bernard Gifford said.

There were no arrests as of Sunday but police said the investigation was continuing. The bus driver told police he was not aware that he had hit anyone.

Bright played mob enforcer Al Neri in the "Godfather" movies, a bodyguard to the Corleone family patriarchs played by Marlon Brando and Al Pacino.

Families swap races on new FX reality show CALENDAR

By LYNN ELBER
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES

When writer John Howard Griffin turned his skin from white to dark and traveled the South in 1959 for a firsthand look at the depths of racism, he relied on a simple medical treatment and his wits.

In the 21st century, such a journey requires Hollywood makeup wizardry, the well-honed conventions of both reality TV and documentary filmmaking, and two families, one black, one white, acting as undercover race detectives in Southern California.

As superficially different as FX's "Black.White." and Griffin's landmark book "Black Like Me" appear to be, they are brothers under the skin.

"Black.White." proceeds with open-minded seriousness as it leads viewers to a conclusion both obvious and powerful: race counts, for better and worse. Expressions of racism and racial identity change, but that bedrock truth remains.

"I didn't realize, more than anything, how hard it was going to be for whites and blacks to see the world through each other's eyes," said executive producer R.J. Cutler. "I didn't realize how genuinely different an experience it is to be a white American and a black American."

The new FX reality series "Black.White." will explore race issues by letting a black family from Atlanta, including Renee and Brian Sparks and their son, Nick, switch races with a white family from California.

Cutler insisted the six-episode show, which begins March 8, doesn't "aspire in any way to say definitive things about race." But participants and their actions do.

In a Los Angeles-area house, "Black.White." brings together Bruno Marcotulli, 47, his wife, Carmen Wurgel, 48, and her daughter Rose Bloomfield, 18, a white family from Santa Monica, Calif., and Brian Sparks, 41, wife Renee, 38, and their son, Nick, 17, a black Atlanta family.

Through artful makeup they swap races, if not perspectives. "You see what you want to see,"

Marcotulli says at one point to Brian Sparks, dismissing Sparks' experiences with prejudice.

"And you don't see what you don't want to see," a frustrated Sparks replies.

Larry E. Davis, director of the University of Pittsburgh's Center on Race and Social Problems, lauds the series' concept.

"Black Like Me" was a powerful work in its day; projects like "Black.White." have potential value for now, he said.

"It will bring (issues of race) into a context and a time frame and a reality that a new generation can comprehend, can relate to and understand," Davis said.
