Twins' Puckett dies after stroke

MINNEAPOLIS

Kirby Puckett died Monday, a day after the Hall of Fame outfielder had a stroke at his Arizona home. He was 45.

Puckett died at St. Joseph's Hospital and Medical Center in Phoenix. He had been in intensive care since having surgery at another hospital following his stroke Sunday morning.

The bubbly, barrel-shaped Puckett carried the Minnesota Twins to World Series titles in 1987 and 1991 before his career was cut short by glaucoma.

His family, friends and former teammates gathered at the hospital Monday.

Puckett was given last rites and died in the afternoon, hospital spokeswoman Kimberly Lodge said.

Franklin A.D. scrambling to prepare for two regionals

Preparing for one boys basketball regional is difficult enough.

But Franklin Community High School is planning for two.

When IHSAA regional play starts Saturday at 16 sites, Franklin will be one of five schools hosting and playing in a regional. But it's the only school that's doing so at separate sites.

Franklin plays in the Class 4A Pike regional at Hinkle Fieldhouse and hosts a Class A regional.

That means double the work and little sleep for Grizzly Cubs athletic director Noel Heminger.

"I've worked through my share of larger tournaments," said Heminger, who will be working 18- to 19-hour days this week. "But having two (regionals) on the same day has been an interesting task.

"It's a tough task. But it's nothing I can't handle."

Franklin plays Pike at 10 a.m. Saturday in the first semifinal at Hinkle. No. 1 Lawrence North (25-0) plays Carmel (17-7) at noon.

Ohio State coach Jim Foster knew who he wanted shooting for a Big Ten title Monday night: Marsilla Packer.

She delivered with her usual flair.

With 38.4 seconds left and No. 2 Ohio State trying to fend off a frenzied second-half rally from No. 12 Purdue, Packer calmly caught the ball on the left wing, squared up and sank a 3-pointer to give Ohio State a 63-60 victory and its first conference tournament title.

"She is one of those shooters, you love them because they have no memory," Foster said. "Packer could miss eight in a row and be convinced she's going to make No. 9."

Fortunately for the Buckeyes (28-2), Packer didn't miss much against the Boilermakers.

She made 6 of 11 shots, including two critical 3s in the final three minutes, and scored 10 of her 15 points in the second half.

Packer's presence helped Ohio State balance an offensive attack that had relied primarily on the duo of Brandie Hoskins and two-time conference player of the year Jessica Davenport to build a 17-point lead.

Davenport finished with 17 points and 14 rebounds, while Hoskins added 16 points and four assists. Hoskins was named the Most Outstanding Player.

Of greater importance to Ohio

State was this: By winning its 19th straight game, it clinched the Big Ten's automatic bid to the NCAA Tournament and may have solidified a No. 1 seed.

"I feel like we worked hard all season; whatever the committee decides, they decide," Davenport said. "We stayed focused, we think the Big Ten title helped."

Still, this was not typical Ohio State basketball.

For Susan Williams, the most daunting challenge isn't organizing sporting events, including three major NCAA basketball tournaments conducted within a month's time.

As president of the Indiana Sports Corp., her toughest task each day is staying patient.

"The biggest challenge has been adjusting my management style to meet the dynamics of the business," Williams said. "People have described my management style as drinking from a fire hose."

"I've ratcheted it way down at ISC."

Founded in 1979, Indiana Sports Corp. is a nonprofit organization that draws national and international sporting events to the state. The group has hosted more than 400 events since its inception, including the 1982 U.S. Olympics Festival, the 1987 Pan American games, four men's basketball NCAA Division I

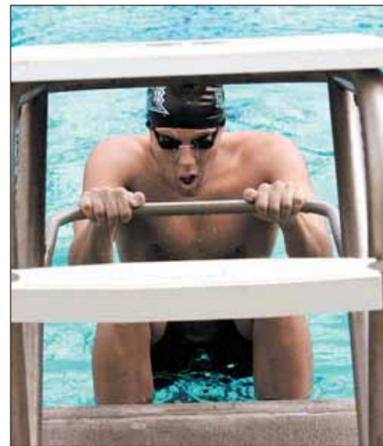

Final Fours and one women's basketball NCAA Division I Final Four.

During March and April, Indiana Sports Corp. has hosted or will host the Big Ten men's and women's basketball tournaments and the NCAA men's Final Four. In June, the organization will host the U.S. Rowing National Championships and 2006 USA Outdoor Track and Field Championships.

The Big Ten Men's Basketball Tournament starts Thursday. "The Big Ten (tournament) is a big event," she said. "The Final Four is gigantic. There's a difference between a regional and national focus. There are more visitors and more media attention."

Jaime Sohn was only joking when he told his family that he intended to continue his swimming career at the University of Hawaii.

But the more he thought about it, the more he thought, why not?

So he contacted the school, spoke with the coach, looked into costs and then visited the campus.

The rest, as the saying goes, is history.

"I came out on the recruiting trip, and I was just like, 'OK, I'm going to Hawaii,'" said Sohn, who concluded his freshmen season last week with the Rainbow Warriors men's swimming and diving team. "I immediately clicked with the team, and I was just like, 'That's where I want to go.'"

A four-time IHSAA state meet qualifier at Center Grove High School, Sohn attends Hawaii on a partial academic scholarship.

He joined the Rainbow Warriors as a walk-on but hopes to earn an athletic scholarship in the near future.

His goal from the beginning was to swim for an NCAA Division I school. The fact that he's doing it at Hawaii is a bit more than a dream come true.

Nestled on the island of Oahu, the school is located in a year-round sunny paradise. Splendor and recreational opportunities sur-

Shouts of "Viva Mexico!" might drown out chants of "U-S-A, U-S-A" when the United States takes the field for its World Baseball Classic opener today.

At least a quarter of Arizona's five million residents are Hispanic, so there should be a strong show of support for the "visiting" Mexican team among the 30,000 or so expected for the game at Chase Field.

A hint came Saturday night, when a festive crowd packed Tucson Electric Park to cheer on Mexico's 6-1 exhibition victory against the Arizona Diamondbacks.

"I expect them to be very supportive, and I think that will fuel the USA fans once they get into this atmosphere," U.S. manager Buck Martinez said Monday. "From my understanding in Tucson, they had sombreros and their faces painted and a lot of Mexican flags. It was a bullfight kind of atmosphere, so that will be beautiful in this tournament."

Team USA will send Jake Peavy of the San Diego Padres to the mound.

"This is probably the coolest thing I've ever done on a baseball field," the 24-year-old right-hander said. "To be with this group of guys, have a chance to represent my country in America's pastime, I
