Racial divide explored on FX's 'Black. White.'

n the new reality/documentary series "Black. White." (10 p.m., FX, TV-MA), two families, one white and one black, submit to extensive special effects to pass as members of another race.

The families share a single house and help each other understand the experience.

Brian Sparks, a black man, finds life changes quickly when he becomes white. His wife, Renee, laughs in his face and tells him she no longer finds him remotely attractive.

Brian goes to a golf club/driving range, where he finds white duffers much more friendly. He's really surprised when a shoestore salesman gets down on his knees and slips Brian's foot into a shoe and laces it up. No one had ever done that for him when he was black.

Bruno and his wife, Carmen, take their transformation into blackness with an earnest righteousness that proves immediately and continually annoying. Despite his "black is beautiful" attitude, Bruno contends that race doesn't really matter and he accuses Brian of looking for, or imagining, racial slights.

When Bruno and Brian go shopping at a posh boutique, Bruno believes that the shop attendants hover around him because they are polite. Brian tells him they are suspicious because they think he is black.

The men spar frequently about these perceptions. Carmen and Renee never get along. At least the teens, Rose (white) and Nick (black), seem more open to the transformation.

Despite its profundity, the series can't help remind viewers of comedy bits, including Eddie Murphy's classic "SNL" sketch as an undercover white man, or Dave Chappelle's incendiary skit about being a blind black man in a white hate group.
"Black. White." would probably work better as a 90-minute film than a multi-part reality show.

For obvious reasons, none of the participants seems entirely comfortable in his or her new skin, and the burden of being part of an experiment grows wearisome for all, audience included.

• In the documentary "All We Are Saying" (8 p.m., Showtime), Rosanna Arquette interviews more than 50 musicians about work, life and changes to the music business.

The result is a quick roundup of short clips from what might have been fascinating conversations, digested here to sound bites.

David Crosby seems most disgusted by the clueless corporate ownership of the industry. Joni Mitchell mourns the decline of rock journalism. Steven Tyler regrets the loss of value to his song catalog due to illegal downloading. Tom Petty and Elton John discuss the destructive side of life on the road. Chrissie Hynde recalls trying to rock on stage while wearing a nursing bra.

Debby Harry and Stevie Nicks discuss their decision to not have children, while Sonic Youth's Thurston Moore and Kim Gordon joke about their daughter and her wish that her parents made more popular and accessible music.

Tonight's other highlights

- The remaining men warble on "American Idol" (8 p.m., Fox). Tyra Banks hosts a new incar-
- nation of "America's Next Top Model" (8 p.m., UPN). • Kate and Sawyer tangle over
- a briefcase on a repeat "Lost" (9 p.m., ABC, TV-PG, D, L) from last season. • Something strange in the
- water on "CSI: NY" (10 p.m., CBS, • Mariel comes clean on "Invasion" (10 p.m., ABC, TV-PG, D, L). Cult choice

A crass member (Rodney Dangerfield), a New Age golfer (Chevy Chase) and a gopherobsessed groundskeeper (Bill Murray) upset the status quo at a country club in the 1980 comedy "Caddyshack" (9 p.m., Spike).

Series notes

On two episodes of "Still Standing" (CBS, TV-PG), deception (8 p.m.), graduation (8:30 p.m.) ... Tons of fun on "The Biggest Loser: Special Edition" (8 p.m., NBC, TV-PG) ... Childhood demons on "George Lopez" (8 p.m., ABC, TV-14) ... power outage on "One Tree Hill" (11:30 p.m., WB, TV-PG) ... Matchmaking on "Freddie" (8:30 p.m., ABC, TV-PG) ... students slain on "Criminal Minds" (9 p.m., CBS, TV-14).

Late night

Beyonce Knowles and Stephen A. Smith appear on "Late Show With David Letterman" (11:35 p.m., CBS) ... Jay Leno hosts Tim Allen, Michelle Rodriguez and Bon Jovi on "The Tonight Show" (11:35 p.m., NBC) ... Michael Rapaport, Elisha Cuthbert and Matisyahu appear on "Jimmy Kimmel Live" (12:05 a.m., ABC).

NEWSOM got married that day.

Newsom, whose divorce from Fox News Channel legal commentator Kimberly Guilfoyle is not yet final, was spotted with Milos at a restaurant after the wedding.

The mayor flew to Los Angeles the following weekend to accompany Milos to a dinner hosted by a group co-founded by the Church of Scientology that opposes the widespread use of psychiatric drugs. Milos is a practicing Scientologist.

By last week, Newsom was being asked about his attendance at the dinner and whether he had any interest in converting to the church founded by science fiction writer L. Ron Hubbard.

"I think the only thing to be concerned about is the absurdity of the whole thing and the fact that people would be taking these things so seriously," Newsom said.

"My gosh, folks," he said. "Relax. I'm a practicing Irish Catholic. I'm not a Scientologist, and I couldn't tell you two things about it."

As for his relationship with Milos, Newsom wouldn't reveal anything about it.

John Travolta back in musical swing

After a long break, John Travolta's got the music in him again.

He thrilled moviegoers in 1977 as a disco dancer in "Saturday Night Fever," and he was a bad-boy bopper in 1978's 'Grease.'

Then Travolta put musical roles aside. Until now.

The actor will take on the role of Edna Turnblad in "Hairspray," an upcoming film adaptation of the hit Broadway musical based on John Waters' 1988 movie.

TRAVOLTA

Travolta will star opposite singer-actress Queen Latifah, who has signed on to play Motormouth Maybelle, according to New Line Cinema.

She seems untroubled by the ageism barriers than can limit actresses' careers.

"There is a certain awareness on my part that when it comes to leads, I'm not the actress they are going to look at, because I'm way too old ... but I guess having family — that kind of kills your ambition. I don't really care about being a big movie star."
