Is 'Survivor' losing to the competition?

oes "Survivor" (8 p.m., CBS) still matter? It cerainly attracts a large audience, but does it resonate? Does it inspire passion and conversation anymore?

As anyone within screaming distance of a TV commercial already knows, one of the players on "Panama: Exile Island" has already begun to freak out and wants to go home. Been there. Done that.

And last week, the first losing "tribe" ditched a provider of fire, fresh water and fish simply because she was forthright and loud. Meanwhile, they saved a self-proclaimed couch potato with a leaf phobia who admits to having never slept outdoors before.

Have the fans taken over the island?

So far the tribes don't even get one of those absurd, nonsensical summer-camp names. In fact. they've been broken down by consumer demographics into four quartets composed of older men and older women, younger men and younger women.

Have the marketing people taken over the island?

Seriously, what's next? Let's cut to the chase and work product placements into the tribe identities. How about pitting Tylenol against Advil? Bufferin vs. Excedrin? Leave a downscale section of the island for the storebrand, generic crowd.

And while this reality show has become just a tad self-referential, its comedy-and-drama competition has stolen pages from the "Survivor" playbook. The desertisland sandbox has been occasionally animated by eccentric characters, but only some "Survivor" seasons deliver. Others have been duds.

Why wait for the next Hatch, Hawk, Rupert or Johnny Fairplay to arrive when you know Hurley is always going to show up on "Lost," and at least every other "24" features awkward moments between Edgar and Chloe?

These characters might not have won big money on "Survivor," but they would have made the game more interesting.

Spears pictured driving SUV with baby on her lap

Blame it on love and the paparazzi.

That's Britney Spears' explanation for why she was driving with her infant son on her lap rather than in his car seat.

SPEARS

Spears driving her SUV with her son, Sean Preston, perched on her lap rather than strapped into a car seat in the back seat. Spears said she did it because of a "horrifying, frightful encounter with the paparazzi."

The photos show Spears holding the wheel of the car with one hand and her 4-month-old baby in the other. A person is shown sitting in the passenger seat next to Spears.

"I was terrified that this time the physically aggressive paparazzi would put both me and my baby in danger," Spears said in a statement released late Monday.

"I instinctively took measures to get my baby and me out of harm's way, but the paparazzi continued to stalk us," she

Producers on "24" had seen Rajskub's work elsewhere, and she says they remembered her when she auditioned. "That's the only reason I got this part," she says. Chloe is an unconventional the action. Five seasons into the show's run, Chloe is the sort of cult favorite who commands a loyal following on the Internet.

Fans write their own stories of romance between Chloe and Jack (played by Kiefer Sutherland). On the series, such a development has never occurred. The message boards light up whenever Chloe gets to do something more than comment on the action around her.

This season. Raiskub has had a chance to expand upon Chloe and get her out of the dark confines of the CTU offices. "I don't take myself seriously
